

Part Three— “Only a Little Sling”

Narrator: The weeks flew quickly by. The children’s choir arrived at the retirement home ready to sing for the residents living there and for the Lord.

Max: They sure are old!

Narrator: Max whispered this to Maxine, who promptly elbowed him in the ribs.

Maxine: Don’t be rude!

Narrator: Devo was allowed in with the promise that he would behave. One of the older gentlemen approached Max and Devo. “I used to have a dog just like yours, Young Fella!” he said.

Max: You can pet him if you like, sir. He doesn’t bite, and he loves people.

Devo: Especially if they have snacks!

Narrator: Several people laughed at Devo’s comment. One of the nurses pulled a small doggy treat out of her pocket and gave it to Devo, who immediately did a flip of joy!

Devo: Thank you! Thank you!

Narrator: The children’s choir sang with all their hearts, and the senior citizens listening loved every minute of it. After they sang, all the kids helped serve snacks and spent time talking to the older adults. They were kids...serving the Lord!

Part Two— “Only a Little Sling”

“KJ! I get to sing in the children’s choir!” exclaimed Maxine.

“Me, too!” added Max.

“They didn’t ask me to sing,” said Devo with a sigh.

“That’s because you can’t sing,” said Max.

“Being a dog doesn’t help you, either,” said Maxine.

“There is a reason it’s called a ‘children’s choir,’ added KJ with a smile. “And even though you often act like a small child, that doesn’t count.”

Devo pretended to be upset at the gentle teasing he received and stuck up his nose with a “har-umph!”

“Do you know what your first song is going to be?” asked KJ.

“No,” answered Maxine. “But we do know WHERE we’re going to sing.”

Max interrupted, “A bunch of old folks at an old folks’ home get to hear us sing!”

“They’re called ‘senior citizens,’ Max, not ‘old folks,” corrected Maxine.

“Sorry,” apologized Max.

“I’m glad you two get to serve the Lord in a big way while you’re still young. Not everyone get’s that chance,” said KJ. “Make the most of this opportunity by doing your best.”

Max and Maxine both agreed to do their best and sing unto the Lord.
