Matthew Week One "Maxine's Light Shines"

"Mom, can I have fifty cents?" Max asked as his mother was checking out at the grocery store.

"Max, I don't want you wasting money on candy."

"No, Mom, I want to win you a prize in the claw game," Max insisted.

"You mean like the heart-shaped pillow you won last time?" snickered Maxine.

"No," continued Max, "there's a stuffed dog that looks just like Devo in there, I'm sure I can get it on the first try."

"I'm sure Mom would be happier with another stuffed heart," Maxine replied.

"Max, Maxine, stand next to the shopping cart and just wait until I've finished paying for this.

"Yes Ma'am," the kids replied and then quietly made silly faces at each other until Mom was finished.

The lady at the register gave Mom the receipt and they pushed the cart full of groceries out of the store.

It was a really windy day and Mom was having a hard time pushing the cart straight to the car. Max said, "Hey Mom, why don't I ride on the front of the cart to make it more heavy, so the wind doesn't blow it around."

"I think you would fit better in the baby seat," Maxine said, poking her little brother in the ribs.

“Max, why don’t you just help me push the cart to keep it going straight. I don’t want to hit any of the cars in the parking lot.”

As Max and his mother were pushing the cart of groceries to the car, Maxine noticed an elderly lady who was also struggling against the wind to get her cart to her car. “I’ll be right back, Mom,” Maxine called over her shoulder as she started walking toward the lady and her cart.

“Good afternoon, Ma’am. It’s a windy day, isn’t it?” Maxine said with a smile, “Would you like some help with your shopping cart?”

“Bless you, child,” the lady replied with a smile, “I thought I might let go and have to chase my groceries.”

“Oh no, Ma’am, I’ll help you with it. My brother has to help my mom push our cart as well.”

Maxine helped the lady push her cart to her car and even put the groceries on the back seat for her.

“I like the way your car smells,” Maxine said, “It reminds me of my house on a Sunday morning.”

“It’s French vanilla. I had some coffee on the way here,” the lady said with a smile.

“There you go,” Maxine said. “I’ll even take care of your cart for you.”

“You’re such a good girl for helping out an old lady like me,” she said to Maxine as she was digging for something in her purse, “There aren’t very many kids like you these days. Here’s a dollar.”

Maxine's Bible Quest

Your Light

- What is your light?
- How do you let your light shine?
- Why does Jesus want you to let it shine?

Good Works

- What is a good work?
- Why should you do good works?
- Why do people need to see you do good works?

KJ's Verse of the Week:

Verse of the Week

Matthew 5:16 “Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven.”
